

ABSTRACT

A first information processing device for holding information connected to a first network, and at least a second 5 information processing device connected to a second network, and an access control system having an access control device for controlling access of the second information processing device with first information processing device. The second information processing device has a copy of the information 10 and, among access requests to first information processing device from the second network, the access control device only allows access from the second information processing device.